CRIMES AGAINST FOOTBALL

From the Investigations Against Organized Matchfixing

The global football betting market is a billion dollar business. That's why organized crime is so keen to participate. The cases of match-fixing that led to guilty verdicts are just the tip of the iceberg.

Michael Bahrs, Germany's most prominent detective super-independent in terms of match fixing, reports on his investigations. He explains the structures behind the individual cases, and how the fight against match-fixing has changed his life.

His exciting report, written together with decorated filmproducer and investigative journalist Benjamin Best, gives deep insights into the worldwide network of organised crime, witnesses interrogations of some of the most wanted godfathers of betting fraud, and raises the fundamental question why politics, justice and football associations remain widely idle.

U96 - Reality and Myth

The Old One and Lothar-Günther Buchheim

Heinrich Lehmann-Willenbrock became world famous as "The Old One". As a central character in Lothar-Günther Buchheim's bestseller "The Boat" and Wolfgang Petersen's movie he belongs to the greatest sub-marine myth of the postwar era. Until the death of Buchheim in 2007, numerous other publications ensured that this myth was cemented.

Journalist Gerrit Reichert spent four years investigating Heinrich Lehmann-Willenbrock, Lothar-Günther Buchheim, the real story of U 96 and its reception in war and post-war. The last crew member of U 96, Chief Engineer Friedrich Grade (103), entrusted him with his private diaries aboard the sawfish submarine. The Buchheim Museum in Bernried on Lake Starnberg gave him exclusive access to the private estate of Lothar-Günther Buchheim. The Lehmann-Willenbrock family gave insight into material that has never been published before.

At the end of Gerrit Reichert's story, history has to be rewritten: Buchheim was a highly privileged artist at the Nazi period and member of an elite propaganda force. His work was dedicated to enforce the German forces will to win. Buchheim's self-fashioning as a dissident and pacifist after the war proves to be a strong contrast to being an opportunist and wartime profiteer before.

MARTIN FRANCIS

Design & Innovation

His yachts are icons of maritime design and milestones of technological innovation, his architectural works perfect syntheses of aesthetics and function: British designer and architect Martin Francis is one of the most important designers worldwide.

Martin Francis, who worked with architect Lord Norman Foster and visual artist Frank Stella, is particularly famous for his yachts: whether the fastest super yacht Enigma or the futuristic yacht A, which Francis conceived together with Philippe Starck - connoisseurs of the scene get enthusiastic about the name Martin Francis.

Marcus Krall not only sketches the life and work of Martin Francis in this multi-facted book, but also opens the doors wide to Martin Francis' workshop.

FASCINATION NORTH SEA COAST

Renowned aerial photographer Martin Elsen has boarded the plane again. After his popular book Faszination Ostseeküste (Fascination Baltic Sea Coast), this time he dedicates himself to the beauty of the North Sea coast from Sylt to Borkum: Cities, islands and their dreamlike coastal landscapes from a bird's eye view.

Next to Top-Spots such as St. Peter Ording or Sylt, also natural beauties such as the Wadden Sea and the Jade Bay are on Elsen's itinerary. All German North Sea Islands are being visited as well as the cities along the coastline: Husum, Hamburg, Bremen, Bremerhaven, and Cuxhaven.

The breathtaking images not only show the geography of the North Sea coast, but also capture enchanting, sometimes surreal moods.

CAPTAIN SCHRÖDER AND THE ODYSSEY OF THE »ST. LOUIS«

At the age of 16, Gustav Schröder decided in 1902 become a sailor. In the following 38 years, he made an impressive career from light sailor to being captain of one of the largest passenger ships. In this function he took over one of the most difficult seamanly and human tasks of that time: Shortly before the outbreak of World War II, he carried 937 Jewish emigrants to Cuba. When they weren't allowed to land there, one of the most dangerous wanderings in recent maritime history began.

Almost 80 years after this odyssey, the captain's great-nephew discovers an old sea chest - the legacy of Gustav Schröder. Partly in his own words, this book tells the Captain's unique experiences. 110 mostly unpublished photos from Schröder's estate complete this rousing new publication.

FLIGHT ACROSS THE SEA

From Troy to Lampedusa

This has been a constant in human history for thousands of years: People try to save themselves by getting to a better world on sea routes. They leave their belongings and relatives behind. Often they risk their lives. Their motives are acute danger, economic hardship, religious and ethnic discrimination, escape from dictatorship.

Seeking freedom and happiness, thousands upon thousands are being stopped or even dying at sea, be it in war or peace. Dramatic events, great human accomplishments and terrible tragedies - all this is connected with the flight across the sea.

Historian and author Erik Lindner depicts the flight across the sea in eleven historical contexts from antiquity to the present day. He works with a focus on individual people who represent the particular event. is a serious and moving humanity theme.

Albert Ballin

Father - Entrepreneur - Visionary

Albert Ballin - characterful large shipowner, general director of the HAPAG, friend of the emperor, privately and nevertheless in the service of the empire acting peace diplomat, guarantor for the humane emigration millions Europeans in the new world - »king of Hamburg«! Like no other, he has shaped shipping in the world around 1900, like no other, he has vehemently tried to prevent the impending First World War. Politicians, journalists, entrepreneurs of Germany and the world came and went in his Hamburg house and his summer house just outside the city.

But the man who "came from the bottom" and died in the last days of the war was suddenly forgotten - from 1933 on. One hundred years later, his great-grandson Heinz Hueber opens old boxes in the attic of his farmhouse in Upper Austria. Suddenly, the breath of a bygone time exudes - and comes alive! There are hundreds of letters, documents, objects from the private and business life of Albert Ballin - this personified maritime myth ...

JOHANNES HOLST

Seascape Artist

When you can see the wind and feel the swell at the sight of a painting, when boats, yachts and clippers are depicted so realistically that you could rig afterwards, you are probably viewing a Johannes Holst painting. Their liveliness and coherence are unique in the German painting of the sea. Holst (1880-1965) has left behind an oeuvre that is as precious and extensive. Holst has created more than two thousand paintings with motifs from his homeland, the Elbe fishery and especially the great time of the windjammers.

This new volume gathers more than 1.500 paintings. The text part is as knowledgeable as it is entertaining. It outlines the work as well as the ups and downs of life by Johannes Holst, supplemented by top-class guest contributions.

CONTAINER SHIPS

Backbone of Global Trade

Containers have become so common in everyday life that their use and usefulness is hardly considered anymore. The usual way of trading and shipping it would not do much without them. The boxes are on the move worldwide and have indispensable become the backbone of the world economy. Globalization wouldn't have been possible - at least not in the current dimensions - without their spreading and distribution via a worldwide network.

This fascinating development that has taken great strides in the past six decades, which are portrayed in this richly illustrated book. The main focus lies on the shipping, because it gave the impetus to the overall development.

Stories of Menu

Historic maritime dishes - newly interpreted

Sea voyages have always been culinary expeditions. The importance of indulgence and culinary delights in the early days of cruises is demonstrated in particular by the historical menus. The design of the cards, the food itself, as well as accompanying pieces such as music and decoration give an idea of how much enjoyment was celebrated at the time. Stories of Menu not only displays a selection of these special historical menu cards, but also provides interesting stories that illustrate the background of each voyage.

The opulent, multi-course menus are interpreted by top German chef Heinz O. Wehmann. His restaurant "Landhaus Scherrer" at the Hamburg Elbchaussee has been awarded with one Michelin star and 16 Gault Millau points.

With numerous images by food photographer Michael Holz and easy-to-recreate recipes, Stories of Menu brings the noble menus to the table.

HURTIGRUTEN

From Packet Ship Services to Expedition cruises

Hurtigruten tells the whole story of the somewhat different shipping company, from its beginnings as a postal shipping line along the Norwegian North Sea and Atlantic coasts to the modern expedition cruise.

Oliver Schmidt, renowned cruise, draws the history of Hurtigruten since their beginnings at the end of the 19th century, when the mail ships under the most difficult nautical conditions connected the North Norwegian Coastal regions with the south, but then gradually became a tourist attraction and faced new demands in terms of comfort and entertainment. He also tells us about the pioneers of the line and the people working on the ships nowadays.

The book contains previously unpublished material from the Hurtigruten museum and wonderful color photos. It also offers a view of the new ships which are equipped with hybrid drive.

LIVING WITH A QUEEN

Everyday Life Onboard Queen Mary 2

The Queen Mary 2 awakens longings and dreams. As the only ocean liner in the world that regularly crosses the North Atlantic between Europe and New York, it keeps alive the great tradition of the transatlantic passages. People from more than 40 nations come together, both as guests and as a crew when the Queen Mary 2 sets sail. They live with a queen, sometimes for years.

Even many passengers have spent several years of their lives on board. In unique photos and exciting stories about ship officers and chambermaids, newcomers and regulars, drop-outs and globetrotters, wedding couples and widows travelling alone, the author describes the magic of this very special life on board the QM2.

WHALING JOURNEYS OF BARQUE »PETREL«

The Diaries of Julius Jacobsen - Eyewitness of the Decimation of Sperm Whales 1877-1884

Moby Dick - epitome of the sperm whaling of the US-American east coast around New Bedford in the 19th century! Two private diaries of an officer of the American whaling bark Petrel report authentically from sperm whaling journeys in the central and southern Atlantic. The author, Hans Jürgen Julius Jacobsen (1844-1889), born and raised in Rendsburg, Denmark, sought his fortune in the USA and hired the sailing sperm whalers from New Bedford for long journeys which lasted several years. Julius Jacobsen's travels mark the final phase of historical whaling with hand harpoons and rowed whaleboats.

Manfred Stein transcribed the diaries carefully, co-authors Karl-Hermann Kock, Reinhard Krause and Gerd Wegner contribute interesting facts about nautical science, historical and modern whaling as well as about the author himself.

SILESIA 1945

War in the Southeast of the German Reich

When the Red Army's winter offensive began on 12th January 1945 at 4.35 a.m., only a few figures made it clear who would gain the upper hand: the Soviet armed forces attacked with 2.2 million soldiers, facing 450,000 soldiers on the German side. The differences in equipment were even more pronounced.

Historian Richard Lakowski looks back on the last days of the war in Silesia, one of the most important former German provinces in the East. Essential for the war economy, Silesia - due to its military geography - was the gateway to the centre of the Reich. In addition to the presentation of strategic considerations and operational planning, the author makes the drama of real warfare tangible. For the first time, material from the Russian military archives on decisive battles and events in Silesia was evaluated.

ERNST JÜNGER AND COPSE 125

Positional Warfare at the West Front in Summer 1918 and its Literary Treatment

"Copse 125. A chronicle from the trench warfare of 1918 " is still regarded as an autobiographical writing by Ernst Jünger. But a closer look reveals: "Copse 125" is clearly more than a descriptive chronicle.

Based on Jünger's diary entries, historian Rüdiger Schönrade draws an authentic and unadulterated picture of the experiences of a young officer in the positional war on the Somme at the end of the First World War. By comparing Jünger's literary adaptations with the original diary entries, but especially with Jünger's sketches of the situation and military hand maps, the author succeeds in precisely demonstrating how Jünger created an independent literary work that represents a nationalistically charged processing of the war experience.

CARL VON CLAUSEWITZ

Strategy in the 21st Century

Strategic thinking is currently largely lost in all management areas. In politics, business and the armed forces, priority action dominates what makes sense in the long term. The hesitant attitude of many decision-makers, party-political constraints and protracted coordination processes between and within ministries minimize every result to a lowest common denominator.

Numerous works have been published on Clausewitz, who is recognised worldwide as an outstanding strategist. This book is the first to show strategic thinking and action as a result. It offers methods such as Clausewitz developed to deal with friction in a complex war situation - at high risk - against an equal opponent. Carl von Clausewitz: Strategy in the 21st Century draws conclusions for the successful knowledge and skills of leaders who can easily be extended to political, economic and all other areas of human activity.

HORATIO NELSON

Triumph and Tragedy of a Naval Hero

The Nelson biography of naval historian Jann M. Witt bears the subtitle Triumph and Tragedy not without reason. For Nelson, his greatest triumph was also his greatest defeat: The victory of the British fleet over the allied French-Spanish forces was ultimately paid for by his death.

Witt shows the human Horatio Nelson behind the hero facade - with all his strengths and weaknesses. In order to make the reader understand the world of the late 18th century and the man Nelson with his "highly contradictory character", Witt allows Nelson himself or contemporary witnesses to speak.

Witt falls neither into hero worship of the navigator nor into exposure of the adulterer (affair Hamilton) Nelson. On the contrary, he shows these two sides: on the one hand Nelson as brilliant strategist, visionary tactician and ingenious human leader and on the other hand as individual, who worked on his own idealization, always striving for rum and recognition and in doing so was subject only to human vices.

QUIETER - DEEPER - FASTER

Innovations in German Submarine Constructions

Today, German submarine technologies are among the world's leading. Although the Germans were not the first to introduce submarines into their navies, German shipyards very soon designed and built the most technically demanding boats to this day. Among them were and are again and again groundbreaking innovations.

The documentary "Quieter, deeper, faster" is dedicated to Germany's innovative strength in this field: from the first submersibles at the turn of the century to the modern fuel cell submarines HDW 212A and HDW 214 from ThyssenKrupp Marine Systems. But the submarine technologies of tomorrow can also be found in this publication. In addition to explaining the various mission profiles of current boats, the book also contains a list of submarines built in Germany after 1945. The comprehensive documentation is rounded off by 130 illustrations, including numerous impressive photographs by the internationally renowned marine photographer Peter Neumann.
